• Evaluation of muscle cell biochemistry on the quality of meat.

• Effects of various processing schemes on the tenderness and value of meat.

• Improvement of meat tenderness through manipulation of endogenous enzymes associated with tenderness.

• Microwave blanching of fruits and vegetables.

• Incorporation and optimization of antioxidant usage in fatty foods.

Dr. Lloyd T. Walker
Professor
Interim Dean,
Research director
CALNS

Food chemistry, Meat & Muscle Biology