- 1999 Hypertext Statistics. Hypertext-based statistics course for introductory statistics. Hattiesburg, Mississippi: University of Southern Mississippi Press, 1999
- 1998 Created a three dimensional model using historical data on ages and heights of children. It represents a study that has more than 13,000 pairs of observations. It is used to demonstrate frequency, descriptive statistics, probability, conditional probability, normal distribution function, the Central Limit Theorem, confidence interval, test of hypothesis, regression, influential points, and outliers. The model demonstrates statistical concepts in a tangible form.
Incorporated pretest-posttest in my classes.
- 1996 Created a Web page to facilitate communication with students and provide them with handouts and course materials.
Incorporated cooperative education in my courses.
- 1995 Used writing to learn concepts and methods in all courses during the summer and fall semesters.
Incorporated peer tutoring in MIS 320 in Spring 1995 on both Hattiesburg and Gulf Park campuses.
Required a term paper for all statistics courses.
- 1994 Quattro Pro V. 5.0. Hattiesburg, Mississippi: University of Southern Mississippi Press, 1994. The book, which provides cross-reference to versions 4.0 and 3.0, consists of text, examples, cases, exercises, questions, and projects, among other things. The book also includes eight chapters on RBase. Extensive handouts are provided on DOS, Unix and solutions to homework and other problems.
Incorporated the use of Excel software in classroom as well as making software use an integral part of the course.
Created PowerPoint slides on different aspects of statistics. Used the slide show to demonstrate difficult subjects and also to review before each exam.
Provided notes and handouts on writing techniques and styles.
Added more subjects to the historical development of statistics. Noticed a substantial increase in the term papers using the subject of Poisson distribution after demonstrating its historical background.
